The Langevin Listening Tour

Dear Friends,

Remaining accessible to my constituents has been a guiding principle throughout my time in Congress, and I'm always looking for new opportunities to open the lines of communication and engage in dialogue with my fellow Rhode Islanders.

It is in this spirit that I decided to launch a district-wide listening tour over the course of the August Congressional district work period.

The Langevin Listening Tour, planned in addition to my standard schedule, provided an opportunity to traverse the state and meet with leaders and advocates over the course of eight topic-themed days: Small Business and the Economy; the Food Economy; Seniors; Education; Diversity and Equality; Fishing and Aquaculture; and Military and Veterans.

Promoting Rhode Island

Tourism generates millions of dollars in revenue and accounts for tens of thousands of jobs in Rhode Island. I teamed up with the Providence and Warwick Convention and Visitors Bureau, the US Travel Association, and other local tourism leaders to explore the Rhode Island Convention Center and discuss how we can increase our efforts to highlight the appeal of Rhode Island as a tourist destination.
